The specification is objected to under 37 CFR 1.71 because the specification, as originally filed, does not provide support for the invention as now claimed.

The specification lacks support for applicant's limitation of a plurality of independent entities. On page 2, line 19 of the spec., applicant only has support for a plurality of entities, and not a plurality of independent entities.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5, 8-12, 41, 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Timmons et al, U.S. patent Publication #2004/0029567.

The plurality of entities located within Timmins et al contacts folder 609 are such phone numbers as Bob's home phone number, business phone number, and mobile phone number. Therefore, a record (contacts folder 609) of a plurality of entities (all of Bob's phone numbers) has been produced.

Timmons et al discloses in [0053] a personalized information service that allows a user to create multiple contacts folders, 607/609-Fig. 9 & [0081]. The contacts folder contains personal information and business contacts, [0051]. The user's profile or folder specifies the preferred types of events, goods, services, manufacturers, merchants so that the user is automatically provided with a personalized service without the need to report the preferences each time when calling an operator to obtain information and assistance, [0006] & [0046]. So, when the user first calls the operator for directory assistance, the operator conducts a data search and generates a record containing a plurality of telephone numbers from the search.

In [0081] Timmons et al disclose, as an example, a profile/folder for a person named Bob having multiple contacts such as home, business, and mobile phone numbers. In [0106], Timmons discloses that the user may manipulate the menu presented by the operator by pressing specified keys. Alternatively, the user's selection is spoken into telecommunications device 244, [0106]. Timmons discloses that when the user presses the #2 key, it enables her to skip to the next service feature. In [0115], Timmons et al disclose that if the outgoing call to the destination phone number cannot be completed because of a call status condition is indicated as busy, the user is afforded additional menu options such as attempting the same destination phone number again by pressing the #1 key or to record a message for later delivery. Timmons et al never discloses that the user can try 2 or more of the telephone numbers in the contact folder. However, it would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art, with Timmons disclosure of multiple contact phone numbers in [0081] and in [0115] of a busy call status condition allowing the user to manipulate menu options, to also allow the user to try different contact phone numbers when the first phone number is busy or will not answer. The motivation for this modification is shown by Timmons et al in ¶s [0081] & [0115].

For claim 10, see [0116]. Regarding claims 8 & 11, Timmons discloses two call status conditions – busy in [0115] and ring-no-answer in [0116]. Regarding claim 24, Timmons discloses in [0082] and EDIT option 707 that is provided to edit contact information allowing each field to be modified. Regarding claim 25, Timmons never discloses an interface. However, one is inherently in Timmons system because as the caller calls in over the in to the operator over the PSTN, the caller's ANI is captured and then sent to a database to recall the user's contact folders. The interface is at the demarcation point where the user's ANI is sent to a database for the retrieval of the contact folders.

Claims 6, 7, are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 13-40 are allowed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

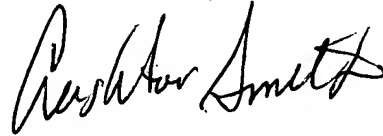

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
